How much does a Polish spectrometer cost

Overview

KT-100S spectrometer for sale from Poland Solec Kujawski, XU38603. Before you decide to make a purchase, carefully review several sales offers to underst.

Key Takeaways

A spectrometer in Poland typically costs from a few thousand to over $50,000, depending on type, features, and brand. The price of a spectrometer varies widely based on its technology, sensitivity, wavelength range, and automation capabilities. Basic benchtop UV-Vis spectrophotometers, commonly used for routine laboratory measurements, generally start at a few thousand dollars, while high-end fluorescence or infrared spectrometers with advanced features can exceed $50,000.

Mass spectrometers, which are more complex, can range from $20,000 for simpler models to over $2,500,000 for high-end Fourier Transform systems. Factors affecting cost include: Type of spectrometer: UV-Vis, fluorescence, NIR, or mass spectrometer. Wavelength range and sensitivity: Broader ranges and higher sensitivity increase price.

Automation and software: Microvolume capabilities, automated sample handling, and advanced software add to cost. New vs. used: Used instruments can be significantly cheaper, sometimes 50–80% less than new models. Where to buy in Poland or internationally: Online marketplaces like BiMedis allow searching by price and manufacturer, offering both new and used devices with documentation and warranty.

Suppliers such as Spectral Products provide affordable spectrometers and fast shipping, suitable for research and industrial labs. International distributors like Cole-Parmer offer a wide selection of spectrophotometers and spectroscopy equipment that can be shipped to Poland. When budgeting, consider not only the purchase price but also maintenance, calibration, and consumables, which can add to the total cost over the instrument's lifetime.

For precise pricing, contacting suppliers directly for quotes is recommended, especially for specialized or high-end models.
