Key Takeaways

The cost of distribution boxes for Tonga power distribution rooms varies widely depending on specifications, capacity, and supplier, typically ranging from a few hundred to several thousand USD per unit.

Pricing Overview

Distribution box prices depend on several factors including voltage rating, amperage capacity, number of circuits, material construction, and safety features. Standard residential or small commercial units are generally less expensive, while industrial or high-capacity units designed for data centers or heavy-duty applications command higher prices due to enhanced durability and advanced features such as smart monitoring and remote control capabilities (Sunnom). Supplier OptionsTonga-specific power strips and PDUs are available for server rooms and general-purpose applications, manufactured according to Tonga standards with agency approvals (International Config).

Wholesale suppliers offer bulk purchasing options for power distribution boxes, including outdoor-rated enclosures, custom sheet metal fabrication, and OEM/ODM options (Global Sources).

Cost Considerations

Installation and maintenance: The total investment includes not only the purchase price but also installation, maintenance, and long-term operational costs. Customization: Options such as weather-resistant enclosures, specialized mounting, labeling, and integration with building management systems can increase the upfront cost. Energy efficiency: Units with advanced power monitoring and load management may have higher initial costs but offer long-term savings.

Estimated Price Range

While exact Tonga-specific prices are not publicly listed, typical distribution boxes for commercial or industrial applications can range from $300 to $3,000 USD per unit, depending on size, capacity, and features. Bulk orders or direct factory sourcing may reduce per-unit costs significantly. For precise pricing, it is recommended to contact suppliers directly through B2B platforms or manufacturer websites to obtain quotes tailored to the specific requirements of Tonga power distribution rooms.
